Our Approach

Align

In the fast-paced world of IT, Frontline takes the view that delivering out of the box commoditised IT is a mistake. There isn't a one-size fits-all approach to digitisation, every organisation is different - so taking such an approach is risky, unreliable and inevitably more expensive.

Although our services are productised to give maximum definition and customer understanding, Frontline's primary focus is to strategically align with each and every customer, with an approach that looks far beyond the immediately visible requirements.

Design

We design solutions with you in mind by gathering a full picture of your business. It's not just about delivering the right IT requirements.

This skillset allows us to be a true business partner, instead of just a supplier, and this alignment with our customers allows us to design solutions and product stacks with maximum efficiency.

Deliver

All our solutions are built by a dedicated research team, giving input from service, commercial, technical, security, and a variety of other sources, and we take pride in building the correct combinations of skills and technology so that we can deliver on our promise.

With business relevance and technical excellence at the heart of all our solutions, we strive to give the highest level of customer service possible.

Manage

We take pride in providing a service that keeps your business ahead of potential incidents and downtime, and we aim to properly manage your solutions, taking as much of the responsibility as we can for keeping your business at peak performance. No business can ever fully relieve themselves of IT responsibility, but Frontline will carry as much of the weight as possible, so that your teams can focus on your primary business.

Improve

The most difficult challenge we have faced in recent years is to create a market competitive service catalogue, built up of all the ingredients required to deliver a fully managed set of services that will allow our customers to focus on their primary business, and leave their IT in our capable hands.
